

13:48:23 From Thorhaug Anita to Everyone:

Q: Have you compared advertising funds to each network vs the baseline funding you discussed? CNN? BBC?

13:49:21 From Ted Manning to Everyone:

C: Good idea. Not sure I can get that data, but worth a try.

13:50:05 From Ted Manning to Everyone:

C: CBC and BBC are publicly funded, so where do the rest get the advertising funds?

13:50:28 From Geoff Strong to Everyone:

Q: How many of these news networks have inputs from the fossil fuel corporations, and do they implement any controls on news?

13:51:52 From Dave Dougherty CACOR to Everyone:

C: Interesting. My sense is that CBC has become more right-wing despite that fact that the Conservatives plan to kill the network if given the chance. That would complete part of Mr. Harper's effort to make Canada unrecognizable. He just never had the time to do it as he was consumed with destroying other elements of our country, like environmental laws and regulations.

13:54:17 From Geoff Strong to Everyone:

Q: Do we REALLY still have freedom of the press' (in terms of news, not just newspapers)?

13:54:21 From Peter Bulkowski to Everyone:

Q: Why is do you deem "state funded" to be reputable?

13:57:18 From Art Hunter to Everyone:

Q: How do you see the advent of Chat GPT version 4 impacting news generators?

14:04:16 From Art Hunter to Everyone:

Q: Adding YouTube as a news source. For example, "Just Have A Think."

14:09:57 From Geoff Strong to Everyone:

Q: Do honesty and integrity have any meaning anymore?

14:12:32 From Mike Nickerson to Everyone:

Q: Does your research cover the sorts of topics news sources cover? For example, how many climate solutions are reported to be material technologies and how many are cultural solutions?

14:13:37 From Geoff Strong to Everyone:

Q: You mentioned six owners of US daily newspaper chains. Exactly who are those owners? Is there fossil fuel interest there?

14:25:02 From Dave Dougherty CACOR to Everyone:

C: A separate source for who owns US newspapers.

< <https://www.titlemax.com/discovery-center/lifestyle/who-owns-your-news-the-top-100-digital-news-outlets-and-their-ownership> >

14:33:54 From Paul Beckwith to Everyone:

C: Replying to "Adding YouTube." Don't forget < PaulBeckwith.net >.

C: Image shows Twitter is growing climate deniers and suppressing climate people. Data is for last 6 months.

14:45:33 From Ted Manning to Everyone:

C: Some of the best balanced and comprehensive coverage on climate and environment is via magazines rather than instant news. For example, one of the widest bought and read magazines in the country is Canadian Geographic, which features well-researched and often in-depth articles on climate change, for example, the tension between northern transportation and protection, or aboriginal rights vs other issues. The alternative still exists.

14:55:52 From Jon Legg to Everyone:

Q: How does the French-speaking media factor into the overall media question. The size of the French-speaking puts it at disadvantage, but the different language also protects it. From your visits back to Montreal, are you part of the "two solitudes" picture in not hearing about the French-speaking media? Your views please.

14:56:47 From Carmen Nobel to Everyone:

Thank you, Heidi, for this great presentation and inviting me to tune in. Here's a link to The Journalist's Resource. < <https://journalistsresource.org/> >

15:01:05 From Chris Legg to Everyone:

Treeline Book That Heidi is Referencing.

< <https://www.washingtonindependentreviewofbooks.com/index.php/bookreview/the-treeline-the-last-forest-and-the-future-of-life-on-earth> >

15:31:02 From Robert's iPhone to Everyone:

Heidi is fully bilingual (English/French).