

00:57:27 Geoff Strong: Q: Trevor, can you define low, middle, and high income countries?

00:59:25 Dave Dougherty: C: I'm interested in how Trevor will respond on income definitions, but this reference will perhaps help in future.

That's a great reference. Dave, and worth sharing as appropriate. :-)

01:03:52 Dave Dougherty: Q: One of Canada's 'claims to fame' used to be that we had a low Gini Co-efficient, indicating relative income equality. Now that we've reached the high levels places like the UK and USA used to have, what does that say about how we should view ourselves? Have we become more mean-spirited?

01:08:30 Dave Dougherty: C: Dr. Hancock has just described the layer cake model on which I used to focus when writing about sustainable development. It works much better than the 'three-legged stool' model that was often used at the turn of the century.
