

14:14:46 From Art Hunter to Everyone:

Q: I have a question on electrical power not being a priority.

14:28:45 From Claude Buettner, MN to Everyone:

Q: You gave some data about a ~1 meter water rise for one of the studies you described. To what timeline is that 1 meter tied? (If all Polar ice melts the sea would rise on average ~67 meters.)

14:33:23 From Dr. Barry Bruce to Everyone:

Q: Is there a business opportunity that gets over the “is it reasonable to ask of volunteers”--struggling to relate to our sustainable local food problem--we think there’s a business opportunity that would encourage scaling up and replicating. So, is a business opportunity next?

14:34:13 From Dave Dougherty to Everyone:

Q: What difficulties did you find in making adaptation plans when we don't much evidence about all the impacts that will occur from this uncontrolled global atmospheric modification experiment?

14:36:47 From Mary Hegan to Everyone:

Q: Are you collecting data and doing analysis of volunteer motives and capacity over time and cultural assets at neighbourhood level? Looking at psycho-social-political dynamics and what convergence is most successful?

14:38:24 From Jon Legg to Everyone:

Q: What does fire do to the soil in terms of absorbing water when the over-abundance of rains come? There was a reference to logging and also followed by rains; could you please go into some detail to illustrate what the link is?

14:42:16 From Pierre Mineau to Everyone:

C: May not have NOAA for very much longer!

14:44:03 From Dave Dougherty to Everyone:

Replying to "May not have NOAA fo..."

C: I agree. It will be one of the first victims as it is a target in Project 2025.

14:44:28 From Claude Buettner, MN to Everyone:

Replying to "May not have NOAA fo..."

C: LOL, God I hope that turns out to be a joke. He said he wants to go after the three letter Agencies and NOAA has four letters. (Yes, this too is a joke.)

14:44:48 From Pierre Mineau to Everyone:

Replying to "May not have NOAA fo..."

C: You have my sympathy. You are in for a rough ride.

14:45:29 From Claude Buettner, MN to Everyone:

14:48:04 From Pierre Mineau to Everyone:

C: ...and she is a volunteer!!!

14:52:22 From Dr. Barry Bruce to Everyone:

C: We're in the middle of an uncontrolled experiment with the world's climate already. We need prototype work, small effective actions that can be studied.

14:59:31 From Pierre Mineau to Everyone:

C: There is a downside of relying on volunteers. The long-term science and data gathering capability rests on very few shoulders. Continuity's a challenge.

15:00:08 From Dave Dougherty to Everyone:

C: Nurse logs.

15:07:17 From Goutam Shaw to Everyone:

C: Thank you, Ruth, for sharing an inspiring volume of work. I do agree with your thoughts with respect to us, Homo sapiens, that we are productive being reactive than proactive. However, we shall continue to forge forward in continuing to educate and take on difficult responsibilities.

15:07:32 From Dr. Barry Bruce to Everyone:

C: We've created massive carbon sinks, emptied through industrial agriculture, which we can fill up again through regenerative agriculture.

[We should not, however, lose sight of the fact that we have almost certainly released far more carbon from fossil fuel use than can be captured on a societal timescale via agriculture, even with the assistance of the oceans, mangroves, and seagrasses. Ed.]

C: Here is a list of climate support groups that are available for deeper conversations regarding dealing with the anxiety of being Climate Catastrophe (Peter Carter uses this term) aware: <https://postdoom.com/conversations/>

15:17:55 From Dr. Barry Bruce to Everyone:

C: Just slowing climate change down is valuable. All the little efforts do that collectively.

C: Personally, I'm also exploring the Jung Platform as building Emotional Resilience will pay dividends as the Unraveling unfolds: <https://jungplatform.com/>

(These are modules for which one has to pay, but James Hollis has a Lot of free stuff on YouTube, so search by his name.)
