

Paul Beckwith: What is Eco-dency. Typo in title? Should be Eco-decency?

Raymond Leury: Hi all, sorry again for the delay. Please put questions and comments in the chat and Art will moderate the chat after the presentation.

Peter MacKinnon: Q: Are you a subscriber to the Gaia hypothesis put forward by James Lovelock & Lynn Margulis? If so, how do you see a path to a sustainable future? Thanks Peter MacKinnon: Q2: As a follow up to the Gaia Q, how do you see your arguments fit the Polycrisis of the Environment, as characterised by various northern Europeans?

Peter MacKinnon: C/Q: And then there is the Polycrisis of Geopolitics which is constraining the ability to address the Polycrisis of the Environment. What are your views on this juncture?

Raymond Leury: Please don't hesitate to ask questions!

Art Hunter: We need more questions. PLEASE catherine: Would you agree that we need more dis-incentivising programs in order to stop encouraging births.

Jean & Chuck Fowler: Are you familiar with the paradigm involved in systemic thinking?

Peter MacKinnon: C: The one child policy of China was for one "free" child, any other children were taxed, though most could not afford more than one child.

Peter MacKinnon: C: Canada was the first country in the world to have an Environment Department & Minister and it was a Canadian who let the Rio UN Climate Conference

Mary Hegan: Karen, Do you think Americans and Canadians worry about extreme weather crises and want action to cope?

Fernande Faulkner: Recognizing our human fragility is the basis of fragility we share with others. In nature all systems are subject to fragility. Can be conjugated with your proposal of eco history.

Art Hunter: last chance for a question.

Claude Buettner: How do we fail collectively less badly? Alternately, how do we rebuild a safety net that is being purposely dismantled?
